C. & C. Resumes; Gold Hill Still Idle

Mining operations were resumed at the C. & C. shaft Saturday morning, pumpmen reporting for duty on the 11 o'clock shift Friday night and the day shift at 7 o'clock Saturday morning. This action followed the issuing of a circular late Friday afternoon by the grievance committee of the employees, announcing that a message had been received from Superintendent A. Wise, stating that the mines under his control, which includes the Northend group, had acceded to the demands for an increase in wages of $1 a day. Regular pumpmen were requested to report for duty Friday night and the regular day shift Saturday.

WILL LEARN THE WHITE MAN'S WAY

(By Associated Press) SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 13. Progressive Indians of southeastern Alaska want to learn the white man's method of fishing, according to Martin T. Hansome, of the United States bureau of education at Hydaburg, Alaska. Mr. Hansome is completing arrangements to enroll a number of Hydaburg Indians in the college of fisheries at the University of Washington and at private schools. A number also will be placed in industrial plants near here as a means of gaining practical knowledge.

Mr. Hansome says citizens of the village of Hydaburg have 25 gas boats worth about $5000 each and to operate and repair those boats the mechanically inclined native boys are coming here to learn modern methods of repair, welding and construction. The Hydaburg Indians are among the most progressive Indians in Alaska. The student body of the government school publish their own newspaper as well as arrange lectures in English on science and business practice. The natives boast of a co-operative store and sawmill. Hydaburg soon will have a co-operative cannery and an electric light plant.

HIDES ARE STILL DOWN; SHOES CONTINUE TO RISE

Cattlemen are still wondering when the price of hides will begin to reflect the fact that the hide and skin market has been demoralized for several months. The price levels in many localities having long since reached pre-war levels, says an exchange. Federal figures show that stocks of hides have increased heavily during the past year, resulting in almost ruinous prices to producers. The cattle industry is passing through a critical period, according to reports from prominent cattlemen, due to short pastures and high feed prices without a corresponding increase in the price of beef.

RANCHER IS KILLED WHEN WELL CAVES

Overton valley was called to mourn the sad death of Calvin Nay last week. Mr. Nay met his death while digging a well on his farm on the Virgin river, three miles from St. Thomas, the well being about 18 feet deep, says the Las Vegas Age. Mr. Nay was down in the well when the timber gave way, which was bracing it, burying him underneath with tons of quicksand on top of him, while help was rushed from town. About 20 men worked heroically with the hope of rescuing him alive, when within almost three feet of him, the second cave-in came, thus causing them to give up all hope. They worked all night long before they were able to remove his lifeless body from the well.

LOUISE GLAUM IN "SEX" AT THE BUTLER TODAY

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Adrienne Renault, divinity of the Frivolity, never inclined toward this theory for the simple reason that she could never imagine herself situated as other women. Yet the eternal problem of sex became Adrienne's problem too, when fate so ruled, and this wonderful creature of New York's night life found herself incapable of solving the equation as the simplest novice in the game of love. "Sex" is a story of universal import, and when this wonderful production is seen at the Butler today it will be shown that its basic theme is so succinct and familiar that it will reflect the problems and questions that have beset almost all of us. There is a cleverly contrived moral in "Sex" for the quick-witted. The climax comes in Adrienne's life when her own husband is won away from her by the same Daisy Henderson of Cobb Corners in whom she developed the feminine arts of allure and the dance in their days in the Frivolity together. It is then she cried, "Oh, God! Why did this have to happen to me?" What happened? Did she win back her erring husband? Did she kill Daisy Henderson? Or wish her luck and move on? Was she wicked, or a "good woman," or was she just woman? These are the questions that "Sex" alone can answer. See it today, one day only.

ONE YEAR ENOUGH FOR THIS ESKIMO

(By Associated Press) SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 13.—One year of the world "outside" with its automobiles, street cars, motion pictures and modern schools was enough for Donald Neuyak, an eskimo boy, who passed through here recently on his way to his old home on King Island, a dot of land in the Bering straits. Neuyak said he was going home to raise reindeer. He spent the past year at the Chemawa Indian school in Oregon learning shoemaking, tailoring, horseshoeing and harness making. Attractions of the outside world did not appeal to him, he said, and he intended to spend his life with his father's reindeer herd.

18-YEAR-OLD GIRL SWIMS SALT LAKE

(By Associated Press) SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 13.—Miss Pearl Kimball, an 18-year-old Salt Lake girl, recently swam from Antelope island in the Great Salt Lake six and three-quarter miles to the mainland. She made the swim in three hours 49 minutes and 49 seconds. Salt Lake sporting authorities say Miss Kimball is the first woman to ever make the swim.
